Generally, existing data sources are consistent with the definitions, time of recording required for the elaboration of qualitative population statistics. But, there are difficulties regarding the estimation of international migration, especially abroad.

3.2 Assessment of source data

3.2.1 Source data assessment

Source data are assessed for their accuracy on a routine basis.

3.3 Statistical techniques

3.3.1 Source data statistical techniques

Number of population is calculated annually, starting from the last available census results (2002), each year adding births, subtracting deaths data (provided by Civil Registry Agency) and using annual migration balance (provided by Ministry of Internal Affairs).

3.4 Data validation

3.4.1 Validation of intermediate results

The data are compared and analyzed on internal, temporal consistency and with other data sources.

3.4.3 Assessment of discrepancies and other problems in statistical outputs

When the results of the census of population are available the current population statistics data are carefully analyzed with the census data.

3.5 Revision studies

3.5.1 Revision studies and analyses

When a census is completed, data on the number of population and its structure are revised till the previous census.

4. Serviceability

4.1 Periodicity and timeliness

4.1.1 Periodicity

Annual.

4.1.2 Timeliness

5 months after the end of the reporting year.
4.2 Consistency

4.2.1 Internal consistency

More detailed data by gender, age and other breakdowns are available on the website.

4.2.2 Temporal consistency

Information for the whole country is presented in long time series, and for the administrative-territorial units it is also available in long time series on the website.

4.3 Revision
